

Downer EDI Engineering

Queensland Safety Advisors recommended the establishment of this state-wide safety milestone be implemented in June 2006. Including today's presentation, Downer EDI Engineering has since donated $40,000 to the charity. General Manager Queensland, John Ryan said, "by aligning ourselves with Angel Flight we believe that we are contributing to a worthwhile organisation that supports the needs of regional and rural communities." Given that many of Queensland projects are situated in remote locations, our workers understand first hand the impact illness has on these communities, and the fantastic job that Angel Flight does.

By this initiative, the Queensland business has created a focus on safety by increasing safety awareness in the work place. Our employees are enthusiastic about achieving this goal and are appreciative that their efforts are being recognised by Downer EDI Engineering through this worthwhile donation. Angel Flight noted that this money would fund up to 40 flights to help people in medical and financial need gain access to vital medical care.

With the whole of Queensland working towards this goal, Downer EDI Engineering Contracting Queensland are aligning their safety goals across the state, creating an integrated team focused on one main objective.

*Steve Shaw, Central Queensland Safety Manager, presents Angel Flight representative Vance Krahenbring with the cheque at Queensland Safety Advisors Meeting in Gladstone today.
L-R: Ross Leask, Vance Krahenbring, Stephan Shaw, Derek Smith*